Comments	Banbury has far too many new build estates with no upgrade to the road system in and out to the M40. The stretch between The Musketeer and the M40 is unbearable during peak times and yet there's also more being built on the JDE site now too. I would support the development if Banbury's roads had more relief. For example, widen the stretch between the Tesco roundabout and the Musketeer to two lanes, and make use of the extra space to ensure continuity of flow. Allow traffic from Hennef way to continue past the Tesco roundabout and allow the newly joining traffic to continue in a right lane. Allow the left lane to become a turning point into JDE and prevent traffic from turning right into Aldi to allow continuous flow up to The Musketeer. Do the same on the opposite side with the left lane coming from Ruscote turn left only into Aldi, McDonald's, and then Tesco possibly with priority, with the right lane giving way as normal to oncoming traffic. I've attached a diagram from my whiteboard for reference. Understand that public services are stretched, but I don't believe that adding more doctor's surgeries and schools would help as there aren't the staff to fill them, so I'd recommend reinstating existing buildings such as the original Banbury Health Centre.
