Comments	<input type="text" value="New documents were apparently issued on 14th November but notification appears to not have been issued till 20th November. Why the delay?

One document, apparently an email, cannot be opened. Is this because the public don't have authorisation to open it and, if so, why? If not, why can it not be opened?

Responses to this application were closed early this year whereas the developer is allowed to continue to add new documents in support of this application. How can this be considered democratic and in the public interest? One might think that there are hidden agendas."/>
