Caroline

Regarding the additional information on GCN – this follows the discussions we had on the possibility of conditioning additional surveys. I do not object to conditioning additional GCN surveys in this way. My only concern remains that should they be unable to survey the large waterbody to the East we may need to assume GCN presence and they may then need to potentially obtain a licence which will be difficult to do without survey information but there is plenty of scope for mitigation on site.

In short I am happy for GCN surveys to be conditioned in this circumstance as long as we have a full report and mitigation/licence information with them pre-commencement.

Kind regards
