Comments	<input type="text" value="When Bicester Heritage took on the old RAF site they did so with a good deal of public support because they were preserving the historic RAF site and one of the last working green runways for the future. They have in the past appeared to keep the balance between restoration of the old buildings and development of new in line with the historic nature of the site, but these latest plans are showing a step too far towards ruthless money-making opportunities. The proposed development is going to limit the operation of the the gliding club here not only in building height extent, and days of operation that they can fly. Also, the site is currently an area of rich wildlife habitat of trees and scrubland that we are fast losing and is much needed."/>
