Comments	<input type="text" value="I strongly object to the application to build a storage barn on this property which I am sure is in a conservation area. I am led to believe that it will also be used as a campsite for customers of the pub, which I also think should not be allowed in a conservation area. The entrance to the site is right in the dip at the bottom of the valley and would cause a major hazard for people using the road and footpath also for the traffic that is leaving the site. If the storage barn is also to be fitted with toilets and showers as was in the initial application, where is the sewage and waste going to go to? I also have to mention the complete mess that has been made to a beautiful old hedgerow and trees, completely destroying any habitat for wildlife and nesting birds. As this is a conservation area I would have thought that planning permission would have been required before any work was undertaken on this project, especially given the mess that has been made so far!"/>
