Comments	People live in Great Bourton and surrounding villages because they want to live in the countryside but the more and more development that are allowed will mean this will no longer be the lovely village it once was. Clearly the applicant won't stop here either, he will soon be applying for another lot of houses opposite. I realise this has no impact on this but still a reality. The narrow county lanes can't take the amount of traffic these houses would create, so would have to be made wider therefore losing their charm and wildlife. Flooding is a problem in this area also. Local amenities are poor, no shop in the village itself, just a small pub. Bus services aren't regular and although you can walk to Banbury it isn't just a short walk. Most people would drive this. As the council knows the village only had a big new estate added in within the last few years, I think this was most definitely Great Bourton fair share of development for the time being. The only people these houses will truly benefit are the developers, money hungry and ruthless. Not their community so they don't care how they effect it by their actions. Most villager just want to protect the village and countryside and it feels like all councils want to do is allow as many houses as possible to be built. All so short sighted, I have children want them to live in a world that has a future!
