Comments	<input type="text" value="the plans with this application are inadequate and I am surprised that the application was validated. The plans should show by symbol, or note, the existing route and proposed route . By and large public rights of way should be retained on their historic routing. Hitherto developers and/or their 'designers' have sought the realignment of footpath routes simply to ease their layout arrangements and not because of any 'structural' need. I submit that this tendency should be resisted as the applicant knew full well that PROWs existed across the site at the outset and the development layout should respect the status quo. That realignments have been allowed in the past is no precedent for continuation of the practice."/>
