The quality of the habitat/wildlife surveys seems to be less than adequate. The bird survey does not identify the small flock of starlings that are resident in this area and use these fields for foraging. Much smaller than the flock that used to be here in the late 1900's it is now recovering in size. Nor does it identify the two pairs of Red Kites that quarter this area on a daily basis. It brings into question the validity and accuracy of the submitted data.
