I moved here as I liked the idea of a small town with very close access to the countryside. Something I did not have living in London prior. Over the years, more and more housing estates have been built. Lifeless, soulless, row after row of un-unique houses. Even regardless of the aesthetics, it is the infrastructure that has taken its toll. Every single day Bicester is backed up with traffic, with long queues causing delays and frustrations in just trying to get about our daily lives. And this has taken a toll on the road conditions which have not been repaired at the same speed. Bicester roads are littered with pot holes and damage now. And finally, the countryside I moved here for is slowly being eroded away into just yet another faceless town. Hawkwell is due to add 6000 new cars onto the roads. That is madness. The infrastructure can not cope. And the fact that Bicester town centre is becoming more and more empty as shops close, means that people will need to travel further to do their shopping and recreational activities, meaning more daily traffic. Bicester will become a congested, polluted town soon with no amenities, just row after row of houses. Add into the mix that Hawkwell will destroy natural beauty, damaging the environment, and local ecology, soon the town will be uninhabitable. Bicester is already just known as " village".="" vital="" way="" work=""/>
