Comments	Stoke Woods is an ancient woodland containing a mix of native broadleaf and exotic conifers, carpets of bluebell in the spring and a variety of bird and butterfly species. With several open glades and a small meadow, it provides important habitats for invertebrates and its prominent position on an otherwise flat landscape makes it a landmark that can be seen for miles around. The construction of warehouses adjacent to the woods will destroy this. Plus it will bring more heavy goods vehicles to the A43 which is already highly congested and unable to cope with the increased traffic with insignificant road safety as we have seen all too regularly, with countless numbers of serious accidents on the past year at Evenley roundabout.
