| Comments           | We are being swallowed up by more and more industry. We can hear traffic noise all the time, we moved here because it was a quiet village. Our fields are disappearing and wildlife with it. Areas flood and natural watercourses are disturbed with each new development. The roundabout between Fritwell and Stoke Lyne is getting busier and busier - we spend a lot of time stuck there - it really needs traffic lights. You guys seem to see a green space (I thought was protected from development) and see pound signs. I understand that people can sell land and retire, I understand that there will be more jobs, but why ruin beautiful countryside? I am sure there is still available land on the old MOD site in Ambroseden/Arncott that would be suitable. That land is already designated as work land or brownfield land. We pay high council tax here and get little in return. Our roads are in a poor state and there is barely any public transport. We will be swallowed up by soulless and ugly warehouses. I do think we really need to start planning with a view to protecting the environment, air quality and life quality of local residents. If you turn this area into yet another landscape of industrial units, you will drive people away. We need balance with progress not a complete destruction of this once rural community. I feel strongly that town planning in Cherwell lacks common sense - do all planners (road planners included) live here? Living here isn't solely about location &amp; transport hubs, it's about people and life quality, both of which seem to factor last in your design thinking. Please stop destroying the area that I live in. If you insist on allowing it's destruction, at least have the common sense to build infrastructure like traffic lights, new roads/bypasses that will ensure that local residents are not totally marooned in an island of traffic, pollution and quite frankly fuck-all else. Fiona |
