Comments	Come on really, Woodstock has nothing there, the houses will NOT be affordable (unless they are lining the runway, wouldn't surprise me if they did), cant Blenheim just leave alone and be happy with what they have already built, I grew up in Woodstock and would never want to move back (also cant afford it) because again there is nothing there, lovely to walk around but wont be when all these unnecessary housing estates are built. Oxford is NOT in a housing crisis, Oxford is overpriced (again nothing here) and more worried about students/University's that actual residents that have lived in these areas for years and years, maybe look at what needs fixing first. Living up the road in Yarnton (though not sure how long this will continue as this is also overpriced) I can safely say the airport is continually noisy throughout the day, are they not expanding the helicopter area also, will this not mean more noise from these being in use more frequently? What with Begbroke science park building, Yarnton wanting to shove in some ridiculous number of houses also will we all just become one town/village? I grew up in Woodstock and will never be able to afford to move back, though why would I Blenheim are destroying the surrounding areas with overpriced houses and jamming up the roads with extra traffic, congratulations.
