Comments	Ambrosden is a village and too many new houses are destroying this. All of the local open spaces are being taken and built on and soon it won't be a rural area anymore. Where is wildlife supposed to live if all land is built on? A new estate off merton road and a new one off blackthorn Road is more than enough. Why are we letting money hungry building companies destroy our local area? Will the council be able to keep up with the increased need to fix infrastructure with increased use? Unlikely. This would also mean more people, more litter, more vandalism, and more problems (just look at kingsmere!). You can't keep packing houses in without problems. Just because they would build in flooding defences for that estate, doesn't mean that the surrounding area won't then suffer from increased flooding. It's apparent as you get more rural that the local river is not coping in winter and is flooding larger amounts and more often. The roads will need fixing even more often if this gets worse and often as its the nature of rural roads, entire areas are cut off because people cannot get through. Please don't let them destroy more of our beautiful rural(ish) nature. They are already going to be destroying the lovely view from my house with a new estate, there can't really be need for another stupidly large number of houses over the road too.
