Comments	<input type="text" value="This building application would ruin a field that is meant strictly for agriculture. It flies in the face of an aim for Britain to be self sufficient in the production of food. Hanwell is a rural village with a unique character. This is the only green field separating Hanwell and Banbury. If the proposed application is approved, it will be the end of Hanwell as a separate community. If there is a genuine need for more housing for the Banbury area, why does the Council not use common sense and insist on using brownfield sites within the current boundaries of the town. Unless this happens, Banbury will end up growing out of all proportion. All the small neighbouring unique villages will simply become estates within a big city."/>
