Comments	<input type="text" value="We cannot afford to lose prime farming land. Land like this is what makes Oxfordshire, not another concrete oasis of I'll fitting bovis homes. The entire area is overstretched, i mayself can't even find a doctor that's taking on patients. There's no thought on local amenities, or the roads (which are in a state as it is). There is plenty of brown land to build on, or old commercial premises is towns then building on prime agricultural land. All the local villages are now blending into one, with many that have lost their entire sense of village life."/>
