Comments	<input type="text" value="Given the fact that the planning process has been egregiously flouted in the past by this applicant for development of this site, I consider it entirely inappropriate to consider any new application until the conditions previously imposed and breached are remedied. At that point perhaps it is valid to consider a new planning application
Until the applicant demonstrates a willingness to abide by previously imposed development conditions, any new requirement for conditions on development is as likely to be ignored by the applicant
