Comments	<input type="text" value="Football clubs are a very important amenity to the community and have to keep up with the time, many years ago my brother was a season ticket holder until he moved to USA in 1979 he still follows from Kentucky, my father too was a season ticket holder until his untimely death in 1981, although they were in different stands it was still a shared experience, my husband and son originally followed Oxford in half fashion both playing football themselves, however when my grandson was 6 it was a granddad and grandson outing and they both became season ticket holders eventually adding a twin granddaughter and even my son, many happy hours at the Kassam this has been the first time in 13 years that they have not rejoined as my grandson now plays adult football himself and junior age games were always on Sunday so at the moment it's back to the radio, however I'm sure they will all in the future want to return at sometime as this season have just been to a couple of games on an ad hoc basis, and again things move on or slip into obscurity so a move seems to be a logical step for continued survival and communal spirit"/>
