Comments	I object to having even more houses being built in an already built up area. Not only are there enough houses in the area, but the road system in this part of town are already ridiculously busy. At peak times (pre-lockdown) there would be traffic queues all the way up merton street and down the road to the train station car park all trying to feed onto middleton road. With the school on merton street you also have extra traffic causing gridlocks. You've also got a busy post office where there is always vans and lorries coming in and out of. Adding another 200 houses would make for another 150+ cars trying to get in and out of the area. The increase in houses (and therefore vehicles) will have a knock on effect on other already busy roads including middleton road, bridge street, train station access, concord avenue, upper windsor street and ermont way. Until you've had to do the morning and evening commute around these areas you don't really understand how bad it is. Before you even consider building new houses, you need to do something about the road systems because it is the exisiting residents who have to live here and put up with the terrible traffic on a daily basis, adding more houses and increasing traffic will be a massive blow to all of us here.
