Comments	<input type="text" value="A new development will cause chaos around here. With a single bollard removed from the street blocking access in front of my home, drivers are using the gap to squeeze through, some of whom are very aggressive. Furthermore, the traffic in the area will increase to a point of being dangerous to everyone, including children and the elderly. Someone will get hurt. Parking will also become an even bigger headache than it is now, with people 'stealing' spaces paid for by residents. As the railway station is nearby, some idiots will park and disappear for a couple of weeks as once happened to me. All new developments should have a car park built under each home/block of flats/other building to accommodate its residents/workers/worshippers."/>
