Comments	<input type="text" value="Drove past this pub many times when working in the area (as jobbing stonemasons). Sadly I missed the boat and it had already been closed by Greene King and flogged, as they had done with so many of the old Moorhouse/Morals estate they acquired. It would be lovely to see this venerable old pub restored to its former glory, at the heart of the village and local life, especially as it's (potentially) the first traditional English pub that many former and current American students would be introduced to, via the adjacent College and now site proprietors. Many hundreds of local village pubs have gone on to thrive under dedicated and innovative ownership and management, once they are removed from the greedy clutches of avaricious Pub-Co property companies and (sadly) the larger of the regional brewers, who nowadays treat these vital cultural and social institutions as mere disposable assets, whose erstwhile soul purpose is to maximize profit and service leveraged debt of the parent company. It should reopen. If the College wish to do so, I don't see why there is a question over this."/>
