Comments	<input type="text" value="On the issue of Ecology and Habitat Enhancement, there is an opportunity here to provide a significant number of nesting places for hole-nesting birds such as Swifts and House Sparrows (both of which are in serious decline), and other species. These nest boxes should be of the kind incorporated within the structure of the buildings. There are a number of designs available. They have several advantages over externally-sited nest boxes. They are permanent, do not require cleaning, maintain a more even temperature and importantly are preferred by the birds."/>
